Dear Saikou

It was most exciting for me to get your two letters -- both of them came the same day -- which kept memories flowing back to 1962, when I was in the Gambia and, of course, Dixon Colley was my host. (I am enclosing two of the reports on the Gambian youth, one of which was written by Nyaswaco, who was a Gambian in the U.S. on a scholarship and with whom I was very friendly. Is he still around? He was using a pseudonym, of course, but Dixon would know his real name. We would appreciate it greatly if you, too, will send us reports. Indeed, part of your letters to me will appear in the next issue of NA, but will not carry your name. Do you want to check a pen-name?)

As you say, although nominal political independence was won by Gambia from British imperialism, it is still a neo-colonialist regime, especially after the capitulation to Senegal. The point is that both world nuclear powers, the U.S. and Russia, are never for genuine, national revolutions except if their national interests are not directly involved. Thus, Russia sounds very revolutionary when it comes to Africa and Latin America, and even there they make double-deals, always sticking with the state power that won. Thus, ~~Russia~~ Russia and Cuba -- were all for Eritrea for many years, but the minute Ethiopia aligned with Russia, Eritrea was forgotten. Or take Afghanistan. They had their own revolution, real, genuine national independence, and so you would have thought that a revolutionary world be with Russia against U.S. But does Russia pay attention to the fact that Afghanistan wants independence from everybody? The most shocking event of all in this period was when the world masses were for Vietnam against the U.S. and for Russia and China. But when the big powers decided on a deal, Russia and China kept convincing Vietnam to capitulate, and now Russia and China are on opposite sides. I can't go into greater detail -- we have written a great deal on it and will send you some material under separate cover, especially because, so far as I am concerned, the Hitler-Stalin Pact, which gave the green light to World War II, was proof enough that Russia had been transformed from a workers' state to a state-capitalist society in the Stalin period.

The point at issue is not the past, but the present. The fact that the year, 1962, when I was in Africa and we all fought so hard for independence, is the year of your birth (Jan 6 1962), shows that you are not part of that world but are one with the new stage of African Revolutions. But I, being very much older, have experienced the Black Movement as crucial and as the one that made us "useful" American revolutionaries from the moment I arrived in the U.S. so a child. That means as a very young youth I was part of the March of the American Negro Labor Congress and wrote for the NEGRO Vanguard, the very first National/Revolutionist Negro organization and paper in the U.S. It is not that past that needs to be remembered, but the fact that when World War II came the Communists suddenly decided that the Negro in America had to put self-determination aside and support the "Allies" against Russia in World War II. It was then that I broke not only with Socialism, but Trotskyism, and not only eliminated the theory of state-socialism but finally returned to Marx's Marxism, which, at first, he called "a new Humanism." This is where Frantz Fanon and we, from different parts of the world, said that there must be an independent path to freedom which both Black and white revolutionaries would call "a new Humanism."

In a word, revolution itself cannot be fully successful without Marx's philosophy of revolution.

We are happy to include a copy of the Constitution of Mass and Letters Committee, and we will send you under separate cover both a Francis Bacon pamphlet and my pamphlet on Nationalism, Socialism, Marxist-Communism and the Afro-Asian Revolutions.

I am sure you will not mind that I would like to send a copy of this letter to my dear friend, Diana, who was the one who brought my work to your attention.

Yours for freedom,
