Dear Ray, yes, I was really interested in the portion of your chapter and since I have given up my hyperactive sleep<sup>2</sup> for a time to write you a letter. I might even dig up the 1000 pages from the cabinet where I once wrote about the "tentative fall of the role of profit" and the "organic composition of capital" under state capitalism.

It became a fashion to fêter Marx as a "great philosopher" and even as a "humanist". All this is nice and good, but one forgets that he spent 25 years on the Capital. Very consciously he left philosophy to give the genuine critics of the view, they <sup>had</sup> (with Engels) closed for ever "philosophy" after they had put Hegel on its feet.

Try to understand me. I am not against Lenin's discovery of Hegel. He might have had good reasons for it, after himself blundering around with formalist materialism. That he <sup>the</sup> mastered Hegel and Marx

I have no doubt - he could not have written State and Revolution without it. But what do you really need Hegel for? You cannot surprise me in the recognition of Hegel's importance, but still, what do we need him for? Don't we have confusion enough? I am afraid that for example to serious revolutionaries in Japan Hegel can very much appeal <sup>to</sup> <sup>some</sup> <sup>of</sup> <sup>the</sup> <sup>same</sup> <sup>people</sup> as to Hengstenberg or to some good fellows 12517 with strong arms or to intellectuals who like Handwritten note in left margin: "I read Lenin's 'What is to be done?' 1902. I have also read Kautsky"

Geist
I prefer them that they should stick to Buddhism!

There, there cannot be today philosophy without Hegel. <sup>Why do we use philosophy? we have</sup> But socialists went further. ~~He is the one~~

~~already said~~ Why do we have to get back to the time before Heinrich Heine who said everything what had to be said about Hegel and Berliner: Philosophy as Reciprocity? There is nothing which gives us ~~no~~ <sup>no</sup> ~~useful~~ <sup>useful</sup> intellectual enjoyment ~~and~~ <sup>and</sup> ~~as~~ <sup>as</sup> Hegel and all of them who directly read Hegel, i. e. Herder etc. But only Marx is concrete. In fact, Hegel became Hegel through Marx. In fact, Hegel without Spinoza or Herder would not have been - but Marx could have been completely without Hegel. What he <sup>not Hegel, but what Hegel also used!</sup> really ~~was~~ <sup>was</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> English & French Revolutions, the concrete <sup>class struggle,</sup> ~~struggle~~

I will write or write about it. The main question is: what <sup>can</sup> you ~~cannot~~ say with Marx without Hegel. There is nothing! But on the other side is a danger involved, a danger of confusion. But isn't there enough confusion? Do you really think that Rosa L.

did not understand the sch. ~~because~~ <sup>because</sup> she knew Hegel's language? How simple would this be. Sure it is ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> Hegel dialectic when Marx Luciano did change language & the difference with Hegel a slave penetration of reality & such, it is very easy to fall in the same mistake as Quetelet - and he is not wrong!

described in a few short sentences in the Critique of the Gotha programme (1875) the "rest" of "bourgeois law" in the first stage of communist society — Lenin grasped the meaning of these sentences better than anybody, not because of <sup>his</sup> Hegel, but because of their concrete meaning for him in the discussion of 1917.

The danger with Hegel is that the ~~Konzepts~~ ~~Marxists~~ Lewis Mumford can quote him ~~and~~ as the "master of Marx" (which Hegel was not!) Quasimodo the physiognomist gave <sup>Marx at least</sup> ~~him~~ ~~more~~ but <sup>as much as</sup> ~~less~~ than Hegel. And already in their time knew M+E what confusion Hegel created — today the confusion can only be greater, with Kropkin and ~~Marx~~ ~~being~~ around. By the way: I never had anything of Trotskyism in my blood and I don't like to measure who is "better", but I liked <sup>Maot-</sup> Tse Tung just always better than <sup>Kruschke-</sup> Napoleon. If ~~to~~ Marx allowed himself sympathy for ~~the~~ Turkey I am allowed some atavism for ~~Maot-~~ the Braudlerianist MAOTSETUNG!!! The Chinese (who taught me Hegel) would <sup>be</sup> ~~be~~ happy if he could see the writings of on the walls in Peking. When I read the first times the "resolutions" of the Chinese Central C. against Krushchov's "revisionism" it reminds me their ~~the~~ ~~the~~ taught Spinoza as Hegel to the Chicago Students in Moscow 1924-27. He always told me that they were the best students he ever had. I used to make him mad when I quote Hegel against him.

Now, Ray, I gave you also the "concrete" lead with which to criticize my critique of your Hegel apologetic - I leave it to you, everybody has a right to misunderstand everybody - I am not against Hegel, but I see a danger in the re-discovery of Hegel, I see more confusion.
Therefore, since I am not religious, I dare say that to me personally is Hegel nothing more than HECUBA!

I am not against theory, I am for it very much, but one should really be concrete. The Johnson "Great Society" or "Wirtschaftswunder" is an excellent material for the organic composition of capital, why not spend the time and energy for such a book which could even be read? - one concrete step which would to say be more than 10 programmes, if I may paraphrase Marx!

Believe me, I mean it!

Poor.

Yours
f

P.S. By the way, ~~speaking about Hegel.~~
