If this meant anything at all, it meant that the negotiations would be reopened with no assurance that the steel monopolists would accede even to the bare minimum recommended by the steel board.

Truman lent his weight to this interpretation. He told the press that the board's plan was intended as nothing more than "a guide for bargaining" and that there was a "decided difference between acceptance of the report as a basic for negotiations and acceptance outright.'

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, then intervened to try to achieve accord between the union and the companies on the conditions for renewed negotiations. It was his opinion that the still existing difference sprang from the "meaning of words." There was a scramble for Webster's dictionaries to find out just what "basis" meant. ## WHY YOU NEED "The Militant"

America's leading socialist weekly gives you:

• The straight, unvarnished facts about the trends in politics, economics and social issues of vital importance to every thinking worker.

• Genuine Marxist analyses that explain in simple language the big events of our time and reveal their basic meaning.

• Uncompromising 'exposes of the profiteers and their political hatchet-men in high office.

• The inside story of many of the major happenings in the labor movement that make headlines.

• A fighting program to com-bat the evils of monopoly capitalism.

The Militant presents the revolutionary socialist answer to the advancing depression and mass unemployment, persecution of racial and political minorities, the menace of fascism, and the threat of atomic destruction in another world war.

• A heartening vision of the bright new world which scientific socialism foresees and a practical way of speeding its realization.

TROTSKY

-Leon Trotsky, "Third International After Lenin." LENIN

Vishinsky's "Optimism" on UN

The Kremlin's Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky arrived in this country the other day all bubbling with "optimism" about the United Nations, whose General Assembly opened its fourth session on Sept. 20. Stalin's mouthpiece opined that "the Soviet delegation feels confident that the United Nations is - as the head of the Soviet government, Stalin, has said — a serious instrument for the maintenance of peace and international security."

How "serious" the UN is as an instrument to accomplish anything, let alone the maintenance of peace and international security, can be seen from its fouryear record as a mere sounding-board for the propaganda of the U.S. State Department and the Kremlin as they jockeyed for advantages in the "cold war."

You have only to read the proposed agenda for the current UN General Assembly to see how remote the UN is from the great and concrete issues and events that are molding the future of the world. The agenda is mainly broad, generalized and vague topics that make for streams of discussion and oratory having no bearing on the real and decisive developments.

These real developments are taking place outside the sphere of the UN and its influence. On the very day the UN assembly opened its session and Vishinsky spieled his little piece to the press, the headlines were dominated by the announcement of the devaluation of the British pound and of the currencies of 21 other countries.

This stupendous development in the world-wide capitalist crisis will have a decisive bearing on peace and international relations. Yet the action of the British, French and 17 other governments in devaluing their currency was taken without reference to the UN.

On the same day the UN assembly convened, the U.S. Senate opened its debate on the multi-billion dollar foreign armsaid program, designed to implement the North Atlantic military alliance. This arms program and military alliance simply ignore the UN, yet they are overwhelming factors in the question of war or peace.

Vishinsky's "optimism" may reflect some little temporary deal the Kremlin hopes to effect with U.S. imperialism. But the Stalinist propaganda designed to bolster UN prestige and palm it off as a "serious instrument" for peace helps to disorient the mass struggle against war and deflect attention from the concrete economic, political and military events which are really deciding the fate of mankind.

Bosses' Way of Fighting--and Murray's

One of the things that stand out in the whole struggle in the steel industry is the difference between how the steel owners fight for their interests and how the union leaders fight for the interests of the workers.

Throughout the whole controversy, the steel barons have been firm and resolute. They have never stopped throwing punches with both hands. They battle for every advantage, concede nothing in advance. They are bold, aggressive and uncompro-

The steel industry representatives speak for a handful of parasitic exploiters whose only interest in society is the luxury and privileges they can drain from the toil of the many.

The CIO Steel Workers leaders speak for a million steel workers whose labor has created the wealth that keeps the steel bosses in luxurious idleness.

Yet Murray does not act like a leader of powerful forces who have all right and justice on their side. He is always on the defensive, always looking around nervously for some avenue of retreat. It is not because the steel bosses are so strong but because the union leaders are so weak and craven that the employers dare to fight so aggressively. Whenever the workers - as in 1946 - throw their organized might into action, the bosses' front crumples. If the steel workers and the rest of the CIO members had a leadership who would fight with as much boldness as the steel corporations have shown, if the steel moguls had been convinced from the start that Murray meant to lead a real battle, the issue of the "fourth round" wage boost and decent pensions would have been settled long ago - and to the workers' advantage.

No theory in the working class novement has had more pernicious and disastrous effects than this one. Concerned only with preserving its own privileges in the Soviet Union, whose isolation produced the conditions for the rise of the bureaucratic caste led by Stalin, the Kremlin came to look on the Communist Parties in other countries as mere oorder patrols to be manipulated and where necessary sacrificed for the sake of diplomatic deals with the hostile imperialist world. First employed to rationalize he Soviet Union's isolation, this, theory was then used to justify the maintenance of the parasitic ureaucracy, its totalitarian police regime, slave labor camps and ther abominations which are the listinguishing features of Stalnism. The Communist Parties abroad were purged of all dissilents, their interests were suborlinated to those of the Kremlin's foreign policy, their right to play any independent role was rigorously denied. The authors of the heory were only carrying it to ts logical conclusion when they mashed and strangled working class revolutions in other countries, as in Spain.

STILL CAN'T EXPLAIN

Today the Kremlin, still operatthe ng along the nationalist lines predicted by Trotsky, seeks to exploit the countries it dominates and not to help build up their economies; to extort revenue from them and not to let them organize freely into a federation of equals. The Yugoslavs, who are themselves among the chief targets of the Kremlin because they shave dared to resist its super-nationalistic dictates, are still incapable of explaining the real causes of the clash because they won't grapple with this fundamental problem.

They charge that Stalin is opposed to independent revoluionary action by workers in other countries who are not subject to his discipline and orders. But why this is so they cannot explain. They charge that Stalin has subordinated the interests of the world revolution to the selfish interests of the bureaucracy in the Soviet Union. But again hey cannot say why. They charge that he wants to destroy Yugoslavia's independence. But why they have never made clear. And the reason they can't is because they have not re-evaluated and themselves rejected the fundamental theories of Stalinism,

How weak and flabby Murray and the other steel union leaders seem by contrast. They have yielded one concession after another. They ran to Truman, instead of depending on the power in action of their tremendous steel union and the backing of the mighty CIO. Murray virtually agreed in advance to whatever Truman's "fact-finding" board might offer. And he hastened to accept, without qualification, the board's miserable recommendations which would give the steel workers next to nothing.

The contrast between the determined, fighting attitude of the steel bosses and the conciliatory, timorous attitude of the union leaders appears all the more striking when we consider what each side represents.

More of the Same

The Negro struggle for social, economic and political equality has grown so strong, militant and effective that politicians seeking Negro votes are compelled to promise some kind of action on civil rights. Accordingly, the Truman Democrats made lavish promises during the 1948 presidential campaign concerning the civil rights of the Negroes.

Almost a year has passed since the election but not one of these promises has been kept. Instead the Trumanites have given the Southern "white supremacy" Democrats generous patronage handouts, turned over to them most of the key posts in Congress and allowed them free rein to block civil rights legislation by a filibuster.

Today the Truman Democrats, looking ahead to the 1950 Congressional elections, are trying to cover up their doublecross by some more fancy talk about civil rights. At the moment the ball is being carried by former governor Herbert H. Lehman, the Democratic candidate to replace Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York who recently resigned from office.

Lehman's sugary line runs as follows: Discrimination in civil and political life is contrary to the fundamental principles of American democracy. Congress must immediately enact civil rights legislation.

Appeasement of reactionaries will get us nowhere.

Fine talk! But at the same time the Democratic high command appointed one of the most notorious white supremacists. Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, to head the Civil Rights subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee. When the newspaper reporters asked President Truman what he had to say about the appointment of this Negro-hater to a key post from which to sabotage civil rights legislation, Truman replied, "No comment." When they asked Senator Eastland what plans he had for legislation on behalf of the Negro people, he likewise replied, "No comment."

Once again the record proves that the Trumanites, like all other capitalist politicians, promise benefits to minority peoples and to the working class only to catch votes at election time. In office they violate these promises - always with a slick alibi - because the capitalist system which they defend bases itself on inequality and oppression.

Reliance on capitalist politicians is a fatal error. The Negro people can win social, economic and political equality only by uniting with the working class to build a mass political party independent from the capitalist politicians and opposed to the capitalist system.

The Banker and the General

By Barry Brent

(With Apologies to Lewis Carroll and "The Walrus and the Carpenter")

The world was shaking in its boots, Shaking like me and you, Because it felt another war Was making its debut, And this was very odd, because One war had just got through.

The atom bomb was looking up. A frown upon its face. Because it thought the battered world Was taking too much space; "Just give me one more chance," it said, "I'll put him in his place."

Markets were bad as bad could be, Jobs were as short as short; The system was unsoldering For lack of real support, And war on Russia's planned domain Seemed like its last resort.

The Banker and the General Were walking hand in hand; They wept like anything to see This unexploited land;

"If it were — ah — 'democratized,'" They said, "it would be grand!"

"If twenty million troops and planes Swept it without a rest, Do you suppose," the Banker asked, "That it could stand the test?" "I doubt it," said the General, . And stroked his padded chest.

"O Workers, come and march with us," The Banker cooed; "through me Your country calls, and all of you Will readily agree

Your freedom is small sacrifice To keep your country free."

An elder worker heard his words And didn't like them much, As indicated when he raised His arm, and shook his crutch, Meaning to say that he would like

To get him in his clutch. But then, with many puffs and sighs, A little Bureaucrat Came waddling up until the sweat Was larding his cravat, And this was scarcely odd, because

He was so very fat.

More of his species followed him, All eager to obey; - They crawled upon their bellies, so Respectable were they, And sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee," And chanted, "Lead the way!"

The Banker and the General Marched off, until they met A dignified establishment Conveniently wet: "It's on the house," they cried, "the House And Senate, so get set!"

When thus a shocking portion of Our funds had sprouted wings, "The time has come," the Banker burped, "To talk of many things; Of (hic) of reds, and acts, and pacts, And the role of underlings.

"But first," beseeched the Bureaucrats, "To show that we're sincere, Please, may we lick your boots a bit, And kiss you in the rear?" "You may," replied the General. They gave a senile cheer.

About halfway through this display, The Banker snapped, "Pay heed! • A chained and docile working class Is what we chiefly need Before we dare pull off our plans With hopes that we'll succeed.

"Therefore we must be sure that you

Will never cut your tether." The Bureaucrats cried out, "We're yours Through every kind of weather.'

And then they all embraced, and sang "The More We Are Together."

"It seems a shame," the lackeys grinned, "To play them such a trick After they've paid our salaries So long without a kick."

At this the whole malignant gang Guffawed till they were sick.

"O Workers," cried the General, "Now will you heed my drum,

With your own leaders urging you To not be troublesome?'

But answer came there none, because The answer's still to come.

Stalinists Keep Their Control Of UE; Split Danger Mounts

NMU Convention Voting

President Joseph Curran addresses delegates as they vote on committees at the 7th convention of the CIO National Maritime Union. Curran supporters won control of all convention committees but suffered important setbacks on their drive to expel oppositionists.

Back to College

By John F. Petrone

I go back to college this week. I am a sophomore now, in a college in New York City which is fairly liberal compared to most. For one thing, I don't have to take a non-communist oath, the way Texas students must every year. For another thing, the college is a private rather than a state institution, so the Feinberg Act does not apply, and the authorities in this school are not demanding such oaths from the faculty.

.The authorities like to boast about the academic freedom that prevails in the school, and about the "objective presentation" of problems which permits students to hear both sides so that they can choose for themselves. But I don't know. Last year, no matter what the course was - history, political theory or literature - the teachers were always slanting their lectures so as to extol the virtues of capitalist democracy and to damn Marxism, directly or indirectly, as the inevitable breeder of totalitarianism. In many ways they reminded me of indoctrination courses in the Army, even if a little more subtle. I listened carefully and never once heard a teacher say anything faintly sympathetic to Marxism or faintly hostile to capitalist democracy. If students are really as impressionable as is claimed by legislators who support such measures as the Feinberg Act, they must have left the school last June believing that Marxism is the greatest evil in the world.

last week when I went down to sign up for m courses for the coming term.

Last year I had been undecided about one course in history given by a well-known fellowtraveler of the Stalinists; I didn't take it because it conflicted with another I had to take and be cause I was told that he had been giving the same course the first term of every school year for several years and would undoubtedly be giving it again this fall. But when I looked for it in the catalogue last week, it wasn't there any more. I asked the girl at the desk how come and she said that "he isn't with the school any more." I looked through the whole catalogue then, and discovered that three or four other fellowtravelers who had been teaching here last year also were not "with the school any more."

So maybe some teachers present both sides of questions to students and maybe students really are given a formal chance to choose for themselves. But at the same time the students can faction. see that if they happen to choose the "wrong" The 14th annual convention, side, they will open themselves to all kinds of now in session here, has the task reprisals affecting their livelihood as well as their reputation. In the meetings with Ching, Murray felt impelled to cling to the last thread of a concession - the principle of non-contributory pensions as against the companies' demand that the steel workers contribute to any insurance and pension plan. for social insurance and pensions

TRUMAN INTERVENES

Ching's intervention proved fruitless, but gave the pretext for further intervention by Truman, who called for an extension of the truce, scheduled to terminate Sept. 25, until Oct. 1. Naturally, the steel companies have agreed, but still repeat they will not commit themselves to any oncessions.

As this is written, Murray and the union's policy committee are meeting to decide whether to accept another truce. It is likely the strike will again be deferred. This will give Truman more opportunity to pressure the union to re-enter negotiations without binding the companies in the slightest.

Whether the steel moguls will finally force the union to strike remains a moot question. They may use the bait of a picayune concession on pensions to catch a commitment from Murray to a long-term agreement that will preclude any further concessions for several years. This is a distinct danger to the steel workers.

Notes from the News

CATHOLIC POWER IN ACTION - Two windows of the Beacon Press offices in Boston were smashed by stones on Sept. 6, Publishers Weekly reports. Beacon published Paul Blanshard's book, American Freedom and Catholic Power. And in New York City Macy's book department, after first resisting, has now capitulated to Catholic pressure and withdrawn the Blanshard book from its regular stock.

ANOTHER UNEMPLOYED - Earl Browder either quit or was fired from his job as American publishing representative of the Soviet Union last July. The former boss of the American CP says he is now looking for another job.

REPRESSIONS IN BOLIVIA — According to a UP dispatch from La Paz on Sept. 18, the Bolivian Chamber of Deputies has authorized the criminal courts to try eight of its members, including Guillermo Lora and Mario Torres of the Revolutionary Workers Party (POR), for their participation in the big strike struggles of last May. The Deputies voted to revoke their parliamentary immunity by a vote of 54 to 18.

PHILADELPHIA JUSTICE - A common pleas court in Philadelphia last week reversed the conviction of Bayard Jenkins, Negro youth who had been framed up and tried for the murder of a woman which another man had admitted he committed. Instead of letting Jenkins go free, however, the court ordered him held for a new trial. * * *

OF COURSE NOT - "I want to make it clear that I am not backing Herbert Lehman," said Henry Wallace, whose refusal to run against Lehman on the ALP ticket means most ALP yoters will support the Tammany candidate.

L. A. ROBESON RALLY - The Los Angeles City Council has called for a boycott of the Robeson rally to be held at Wrigley Field Sept. 30 (see story on P. 1).
