Defend ALL Unions Under Attack

Organized labor was bitterly opposed to the Butler bill before it became part of the "Communist Control Act of 1954." The liberals, who were supposed to be representing labor's political interests in Congress, also opposed the Butler bill. Then the liberals made their aboutface, introduced their measure to outlaw the Communist Party, accepted the Butler bill as part of this measure, and turned the unions over to the mercy of the Subversive Activities Control Board.

The labor officials reacted at first with a stunned silence. Now they are recovering their tongues and saying a few words. But what are they saying and what are they doing? It is all well and good for them to express alarm at the anti-union intent of the act. But is that enough?

Instead of denouncing the liberals for cynically defaulting on their promises to labor, the union officials are covering up the Democratic Party's role.

Instead of drawing the most important lesson from the liberal sellout and reorienting labor's political policy toward an independent Labor Party, the officials are once again booming it up for the Democratic Party.

Instead of declaring in no uncertain terms that labor will not tolerate the application of the union-busting measure against a single "looking the other way" while the Department ism towards attempting a deal time when the working class of Justice singles out such unions as the Mine, with Stalinism. Swallowing a Camel

As pretty nearly everyone expected and as the Militant predicted all along in the course of the televised Army-McCarthy probe, the final reports of the Senate subcommittee members who conducted the 36-day hearings deal more or less mild slaps on the wrists to the principals involved. There were two main reports, a majority and minority, divided on exact political party lines.

The four Republicans shook a mildly reproving finger at fascist Senator McCarthy for "permitting" his aide Roy Cohn to use "undue" pressure to get preferential treatment for Mc-Carthy's other aide Schine who was drafted into the Army. They also waved an admonitory finger at Secretary of the Army Stevens for "placation" of McCarthy, Cohn and Schine.

The three Democrats used stronger wording but found essentially the same criticism of both McCarthy and Stevens. They added, however, reference to McCarthy's use of "confidential" and "secret" matter taken from Army files and wondered whether this were not subject to investigation under the espionage laws.

But neither the two main reports, nor supplementary reports by Senators Potter and Dirksen, give the slightest indication of the real issues involved in the dispute between the Wis-

Drought Can Be Ended

By Carl Goodman

"Everybody talks about the weather, but no one does anything about it," said Mark Twain. This is still true today, although weather continues to be a major problem in the U.S. with floods in the springtime, drought in the summer and whole areas of the country transformed into a dust bowl for lack of timely rain. This spells ruin for countless farmers and skyhigh prices for fruits and vegetables in the cities.

But something could be done about the weather. In fact it can be brought under man's strict control at least wherever it affects him economically. This is the judgment of Capt. H. T. Orville, USN (Ret.), head of the U.S. Weather Bureau. Writing in Collier's on May 28, 1954, Orville urges the government to enter the weather control field with "an effort as large as the Manhattan Project for the development of atomic energy. Mastery of the weather is theoretically possible if our research is expanded on that scale."

Orville believes that within 40 years weather can be brought within mankind's complete control if a "Manhattan Project" type of program is launched.

"By milking rain or snow from reluctant clouds at the proper time and place," he predicts, "we may be able to transform vast barren areas like the dust-bowl into fertile crop-productive land." Rain on order would also curb forest fires that destroy an average of 16,000,000 acres of U.S. timber every year. We might also be able to prevent rain, for the farmer when he wants to dry his hay, for the fruit grower who fear fungus promoting dampness. Thunderstorms that wreck crops through hail and tornadoes that bring death and destruction may be busted up before they get under way. These are some of the things that Orville believes can be accomplished in the near future.

But, he says, we will not have to wait 4 years to begin controlling the weather. He BOARD RULES MAYHEW devices already in existence or now under devices already in existence or now under development." Cloud seeding is already successful, he maintains, in several areas where rain-making has become a commercial venture. For instance one rain-making firm in 1953 in-Workers Party candidate for Congress in the 2d District, creased the water in the Dallas, Texas drainage basin 363% while in nearby drainage basins not subject to cloud-seeding the amount of water ranged from a decrease of 22% to an increase of 19% in the same six-month period

Will Orville's recommendations be acted on? It is hardly likely that they will be under a capitalist government. Capitalist statesmen launch huge projects on the order of the Manhattan Project on atomic energy only for war purposes — for discovering instruments of death, not for planning abundance. Any benefits that accrue to mankind from these undertakings - such as the productive uses of atomic energy - are by-products of the research and not the main concern of capitalist governments.

Manhattan Projects — that is, the pooling of all the best scientific brains in a given field with vast sums at their disposal --- need to be launched in a great number of fields where man seeks to complete his mastery over nature. law. There is the weather to conquer, diseases to conquer, new types of foods, raw material, and could be solved in a planned way and in a definite span of time through Manhattan party, he would leave the way

The sadistic murders committed by four Brooklyn boys were conveniently timed for Police Commissioner Adams, who is demanding 7,000 more cops in New York. penalties for young criminals, corporal punishment for unruly children in school and at home and, of course, the "fear of God."

A closer examination of this and many similar cases indicates a need for something quite different from fear and force. Koslow, the so-called brains of the gang, needed psychiatric care. This was known because he was actually under treatment at the age of seven. His mother discontinued the treatment because she felt it was somehow shameful to have her child going to a psychiatrist.

A study of other teen-age murder cases reveals the same need for early care. Take Henery Agard, condemned to life imprisonment at the age of 16. The child of an unmarried mother who worked in a factory at night. he wandered the streets unsupervised at all hours. At eight he was arrested for unnatural sex acts, at ten for setting fires at school and breaking into a tavern to steal cigarettes, at eleven for assaulting and breaking the leg of a 14-year old girl.

it. The people who were professionally qualified those in charge of the AFL longtc understand such cases — teachers, judges, shoremen's union, is already tryprobation officers - didn't do any better than ing to salvage something out of the parents.

There's one obvious reason why the courts con't recommend psychiatric care. It's not available. Not many parents are in a position to pay for it and the few free clinics and guidance centers that exist are jammed with emergency cases. You have to wait for a child to become pretty violent before you can get him in. It's usually impossible to obtain preventive treatment in the early stages of emotional illness.

Psychiatric treatment is not a complete answer. Complex social problems are involved which we can't solve until we change the kind cf society we live in. But the fact remains that it might have been possible to give these children some help. The principal reason they didn't get it is that the money is being spent on cops instead of clinics, on jails instead of Board either against the federaschools.

Notes from the News

"WE ARE HARDLY LIVING," said Benton Kiser, one of the 1,001 unemployed coal miners in Dante, Va., who were standing "the other day . . . for hours in the hot sun to draw a ration of beans, shortening and canned beef." A breadline without bread," explains Labor in its Aug. 21 issue. Another miner, Alonzo Hurd, thinks "the present situation . . . in the coal fields is worse than any I experienced in Hoover's times and it keeps getting worse - not better."

"THE SITUATION ISN'T SERIOUS - so far," that is. But "rising withdrawals of saved-up cash are causing increasing concern among bankers and life insurance officials" in the nation's financial capital. The Aug. 27 Wall Street Journal quotes one New York savings bank official as saying: "We've had 5,000 depositors close out their accounts so far this year. That's twice as many as in all 1953." Another banker predicts that "if withdrawals continue to rise at the present rate they're going to make a big dent in the new money we have available for invest-ment." What could be worse?

A MAN'S HOME IS NOT HIS CASTLE if the man is a Negro and buys a home in a white section of Louisville, Ky. Shortly after Andrew Wade IV, Negro contractor, moved into his new home, "shots were fired into it and a cross burned nearby." Then an "explosion damaged the house heavily," after which county police maintained "a 24-hour watch," asking Wade to provide a list of approved visitors. Later when the police refused entry to Wallace W. Tircuit, a friend whose name was overlooked on the list, Wade came to his rescue. Both Tircuit and Wade were arrested, reports the Kansas City Call. When Judge Michael Hellmann fined Tircuit $20 for Attorney General or the Board." "breach of peace," Wade interrupted the judge, saying: "I don't want a prejudiced decision in this."
