FAKE SCHOOLS

The news columns of the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Examiner of last February, in which were printed the ridiculous claims of certain rail-foad managers that 10,000 telegraph operators, which they "could not get," were required to enforce the nine-hour law, have been reproduced in the advertising of a telegraph school to induce young men and women to take scholarships.

These claims were made by the railroad managers while the interstate commerce commission was hearing the pleas of the railroads for an extension of time.

The extension of time was not granted, but the roads experienced no trouble in securing the operators necessary to fill the places at low wages and left a surplus besides.

WHAT THE SUBSCRIPTION HUSTLERS DID

Sample copies of this edition go to telegraphers in all parts of the United States and Canada. To operators in or adjacent to Chicago the Chicago Daily Socialist is well known; it is read by many members of both the C. T. U. and the O. R. T. throughout the continent. But as compared to the total membership, these constitute a small portion. It is to introduce the only daily working class newspaper printed in the English language that the sample copies are mailed today.

cles the following will prove interesting:
At the inception of the telegraphers' strike last year the Daily immediately

At the inception of the telegraphers' strike last year the Daily immediately hired a striking operator to report the progress of the battle for shorter hours, better wages and union principles. The columns of the paper were thrown open to both the local and national organization and every effort was made to co-operate with and sid the union.

This was not done because the paper sought the patronage of the strikers. They were entering upon a fight which bid fair to tax their individual resources; no financial aid was asked or expected from individual strikers or from locals. The Daily threw its influence into the operators' fight because the Daily was and is owned, controlled and edited by members of the working class and by union men and women. It has done this in every conflict in which organized labor engaged. It will continue the same policy so long as it exists.

Never during the strike did the Daily Socialist lend itself to the schemes of capitalist papers to discredit the C. T. U. at the behest of the Western Union or the Postal companies. The tacit threat to discontinue newspaper press rates by the companies in no way affected the paper's fight for the union.

the Postal companies. The tacit threat to discontinue newspaper press rates by the companies in no way affected the paper's fight for the union.

As opposed to this, every operator remembers the almost universal campaign of falsification and misrepresentation inaugurated by the capitalist press; the national office was put to the expense of the daily publication of the "Mailogram" in order to keep the membership informed upon the truthful progress of the strike. This, because the "Republican," "Democratic" and 'Independent' newspapers bowed to the will of the companies, whom they served to the detriment of the strikers.

This was and is to be expected. NONE BUT A WORKING-CLASS NEWS-PAPEE COULD BE EXPECTED TO CHAMPION A LABOR UNION ON STRIKE WHEN ORDERED TO DISCREDIT THAT UNION BY THE CORPORATION AGAINST WHICH THE STRIKE WAS CALLED. The following expressions from officials of the O. B. T. and the C. T. U. are further evidence of the consistent stand of the Daily Socialist for the cause of labor:

G. DAL JONES.

G. DAL JONES.

Chief Telegrapher, Order of Eailway Telegraphers.

"The Daily Socials thas proved itself indispensable to the cause of organized labor. The telegraphers have seen the value of a daily paper upon which they can depend during time of strike. The paper should be read by every operator."

WESLEY RUSSELL

WESLEY RUSSELL.

General Secretary Treasurer, Commercial Telegraphers' Union:

"I believe the Daily Socialist has been a consistent champion of our cause and that it was of great service during the strike. It put before the reading public certain truthful phases of the strike which they could not have learned otherwise. While I am not a Socialist, I am a subscriber to the paper and have taken it from the start."

PRANK LIKES

FRANK LIKES. President Chicago Local No. 1 and Member National Executive Board, President Chicago Local No. 1 and Administration of the freedom of the press, the only exponent of the rights of the people and the only daily journalistic friend of the working class printed in the English language. Just as there have been former strikes, so will there be other walkouts of organized labor. Every new subscriber strengthens the most effective weapon in the hands of the laboring classes today. Every new name on the subscription list adds another means of disseminating the truth regarding labor's cause and lessens the power of labor's opponents to distort the public mind upon points at lessens the power of labor's opponents to distort the public mind upon points at lessens the power of labor's opponents to distort the public mind upon points at lessens.

If YOU are one of the recipients of a sample copy today you can become a factor in this work of giving effective battle to the opponents of organized labor. Your subscription will help—and you won't be alone, either.

JOHN SPARGO

CHICAGO DAILY SOCIALIST 180 Washington St., Chicago, III.

In a time covered by the span of life of many still on earth the whole system of communicating intelligence by electricity has arisen and been developed. The tremendous sweep of this invention, like that of many others, is so large that but a small portion of its arc falls within the observation of any individual. Moreover, this is a time of such swift and tremendous changes that revolutions which would once have filled generation after generation with matter for consideration are passed by with scarcely a thought.

Telegraphy was one of those inventions that arose as if in response to a demand. Like the invention of the steam engine following close upon that of the power loom, and thereby making possible an effective realization of the previous invention, so telegraphy came at a time when further utilization of the railroad would have been practically impossible without some means of instant communication.

Today a railroad unaccompanied by a telegraph is almost unthinkable, yet for the first twenty years of railroading there was no telegraph. Try to imagine a railroad without a train dispatcher, without any means of communicating between stations save by the trains themselves, and it will soon be discovered that the picture is well nigh impossible of being conceived.

The Socialist knows that each great invention brings with it corresponding social changes. In fact, it is one of the great principles which Socialism has discovered and elaborated that it is through such inventions that progress comes.

The telegraph made it possible for a world to think together. It made possible the modern newspaper, and nearly all modern intellectual movements. At the time of the invention of the telegraph and its general application, and the wide extension of the railroad which that application made possible, the United States was already beginning to develop local peculiarities. The residents of Indiana, Virginia, New York and Missouri were becoming differentiated into peculiar nations.

The possibility of swift exchange of thought and of transportation of persons and goods laid the foundation of national unity, and made possible the success of the Northern armies in the Civil War.

This list of changes wrought by the telegraph could be extended to an almost infinite existence, and it would be, of course, easy to exaggerate and impossible to detern te accurately just how much these changes were due to other far-reaching inventions.

One of the consequences of this instantaneous communication of a nation's thought was the growth of a feeling of social solidarity. This feeling has found its first and strongest expression among the

This paper goes today to several thousand telegraphers who are not regular subscribers, and this fact of the solidarity of Labor brought about to no small degree through the operation of the instrument at which they work each day, should suggest to them the possibility of a wider realization of that same solidarity.

Mechanically the world is ready for common action. The powers of production are so perfect that there is no need longer to fight for food and clothing and shelter. We fight today only because it is profitable for a small class to have us fight.

The telegrapher today does more work in a minute than the old courier could do in years. Yet he receives but a living, and the courier received no less.

Put these things, apparently unrelated, together. Let the telegrapher, and the whole body of workers, who are today producing such an abundance of wealth and receiving so little of it, recognize the solidarity which the new means of communication and transportation have made possible and use their political power to take possession of the marvelous means with which wealth is produced and THEN KEEP THE PRODUCT.

Does that sound somewhat involved? All right. Let's say it in a somewhat simpler way. The telegraph and the railroad, the factory and machine shop can produce far more than the people of the world the ladies' by saying so, is the intimatheir operation that for one set of men to own them as individuals. The polite insincerity here is obvious gives those individuals the power of life and death over all non- when it is considered that no means are owners. But the non-owners, through the operation of these same means of communication, are enabled to act and think together and can form themselves into a political party that shall capture the government and use it to secure possession of those great new complex tools and use them for the benefit of all.

THAT IS WHAT SOCIALISM STANDS FOR.

There are just as many natural resources and just as skillful men in this country as there were a year ago. If the workers owned in the resources there would be no army of unemployed.

Why should the working class ever beg for legislative favors?

They have the votes and the power to Take. Let the capitalist class, who do not have the votes, do the begging.

With the corporations paying the campaign expenses of the Republican and Democratic parties, it is not hard to tell who will control the officials elected.

AN ATTACK AND A REPLY

ered a series of lectures in Galveston, Tex., on European cities. In these lectures, intended as propaganda speeches for Socialism, he points ou the simple fact that the most live vital force in many European cities is the Socialist movement. He describes at some length the strength of Socialism in various countries and discusses the work of its representatives.

The telling of these facts seems to have aroused a local Catholic priest, Father Kirwan, who accordingly devoted a sermon in the cathedral to a denuncia tion of Socialism. According to the report in the Galveston Daily News, from which the portions of his attack hereafter quoted are taken, he indulged in the usual ignorant tirade of the enemies of Socialism. But just because it is a USUAL tirade, and has therefore been many times delivered, it deserves one

He begins by saving that he is not going to deal with Socialism "as an ecomie theory." This means that he is not going to deal with it at all, for that is just what Socialism is-an economic theory. This is very much as if one should begin an attack upon Roman Catholicism by saying that he was not going to deal with it "as a religion." After this it need occasion no surprise to find that he is really not discussing Socialsm at all, although he pretends to be so dong.

Says Socialism Opposes Christianity

His first two counts are on the ground that Socialism is opposed to Christianity. As to whether that is true or not, the Daily Socialist shall not attempt to definitely decide, because the two things belong in different fields. With Christianity "as a religion," Socialism "as an economic mevement" has nothing

If Christianity is an economi cand political movement, and as for the exploitation and enslavement of the great majority of the human race, for the system which drives women to the brothel and men to the penitentiary, which puts a premium on fraud and lying and poisonous adulteration, and murwhich puts a premium on fraud and lying and poisonous adulteration, and mur-der and every crime known to man, then Socialism as "an economic and political movement" is opposed to Christianity. On the other hand, if Christianity 'as an co-nomic and political movement'' stands for the establishment of a society where men and women can be decent without being punished by starvation, where burnen beings can live together in brotherhood and not be compelled to fight like wild beasts in a jungle for a chance to live, then Christianity can only realize the success of such "an economic and political movement" by working with the Socialist "economic and political movement."

His third objection to Socialism is that "It strikes at the very root of family life, and declares the sacred institution of matrimony unnecessary." This is just a plain, flat footed falsehood. It is capitalism which strikes at the root of the family and tears up those roots for millions of families. It is capitalism that auctions off the women of the rich to the diseased and degenerate descendants of a decaying European aristocracy. It is capitalism that brings the factory into the home, turning it into a hell, and tears the mother from the home to place her in the factory. It is capitalism that maintains preat armies of white slaves in every great city. It is the ripest fruits of capitalism that furnish the salacious scandals that pollute the pages of the yellow press. The Suells, Coreys, Goulds, Thaws, and their ilk are not Socialists. The less said about the family by the defenders of capitalism the better.

Sees "Uniform State of Mediocrity"

The Daily Socialist cannot but believe that he has been misquoted in his next item of attack. He is quoted as saving: "It cries out the equality of men, not merely the equality of nature, the equality of end and aim, the same natural moral law for all men, but the actual and universal equality of rights in actual social life." If he really wishes to attack the principle of equal "RIGHTS" would leave him to settle the question with those who said: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal and are endowed with certain inglienable rights." It is rather late in the day to attack the idea that all should have equal social rights.

But he goes on to complain that Socialism seeks to introduce "a uniform state of medicerity." Again he is seeking to impute the sins of the present system to its apponents. It is the present organization of society which tends to reduce the whole great working class to a "uniform state of medlocrity" of one sort and the whole capitalist class to an equal "uniform state of medicerity of a somewhat different sort. The Socialist would first guarantee to all the possibility of physical life and health, and would then afford a basis for such a diversity of development of individual talents and inclination as the world has never dreamed possible.

Socialists Plead Guilty to This His fifth charge Socialists must admit. He says of Socialism: "It attacks property rights." It certainly does attack one form of property rights, the property rights in those things essential to the life of all, or rather it proposes to vest those property rights in society instead of in the individual. The Socalist says that just as there was a time when the rivers were looked upon as private property and were occupied by robber barons, who took toll from passing merchants, until the time came when it was decided to "attack property rights" of this character, and to henceforth vest them in the public, so today the highways of commerce and means by which a nation produces its food and shelter and lothing, and without which it cannot live, should no longer be held by individals who use that power to levy toll on all who use these things. His final count is to the effect that Socialism "promotes, prompts and excites evolution." If by "revolution" he means secret conspiracy or violent out-reaks, this charge is simply another case of falsification, for no one has pointed out the hopelessness and fruitlessness of such action on the part of the working lass more emphatically than Socialist writers. If by "revolution" is meant such complete change in social institutions as is brought about by a transference of ower in state and industry from an exploiting capitalist class to a producing vorking class, then the Socialist does advocate revolution.

There is a comment of the priest in this connection that is worthy of notice. He says: "The Catholic Church stands for law and order." Not always, good father. It did not in France a year ago. On the contrary, it was orging its nembership to resist with mob violence all efforts of the civil authorities to entorce some legislation that did not please the church. Neither has the attitude of the priests of Ireland always been strictly on the side of "law and order, English roters have often found to their sorrow, and as the church has often boasted. However, the church is not now being judged in this respect, but rather Father Kirwan's statement.

Brings Forward Nothing New

So much for the attack of Father Kirwan. He brings forward nothi and few things that are true. His argument can have no effect save with the ignorant, and even with them it may possibly cause sufficient curiosity to impel them to investigate far enough to learn that they have been deceived concerning the nature of Socialism, and if they do it will not be Socialism that will suffer.

A WINDOW BOX

BY NANNIE PARKER

I looked from out my window, and, oh! charming was the scene, The flowers all in blossom and the grass so emerald green. The little birds were singing from the top of every tree, And oh! the world was beautiful, so beautiful to see.

I looked from out my window, and I was a child again; I heard my playmates calling a down the shady lane; I saw the purple violets the little silver stream. And heard such fairy lengther as a child hears in a dream.

I looked from out my window, and my own true love stood there, And oh! his eyes were shining and so gallant was his air; And he cried! "My pretty sweetheart, Oh. come with me today. For the world is in its springtime and you my Queen of May."

I ran anto my window with a happy, joyons cry.
But there were just some flowers in a casement near the sky.
Oh! The flowers still are blooming in their wall of city stone,
But they greet a weary woman in a foreign land alone.
