

ORGAN OF THE NEW ENGLAND LABOR REFORM LEAGUE.

VOLUME II.]

LOWELL, (MASS.) FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 12, 1847.

[NUMBER 35]

THE VOICE OF INDUSTRY,
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
W. W. YOUNG, & MISS M. EASTMAN.

WM. F. YOUNG, EDITOR.

TERMS.—

A single copy, $1.25 per annum. 3 Strictly in ADVANCE.

Five copies to one address, $5.3 Strictly in ADVANCE.

All correspondence, for business or editorial department of this paper, should be addressed (POST

PAGE) to "The Voice of Industry."

Subscribers wishing to continue or persons becoming subscribers, will please bear in mind that our terms are to remain before the expiration of their payment.

Postmasters are authorized to frank letters containing notices of removals, non-receipts, disbursements, and all other Post Office business.

Advertisements of a useful and proper character, inserted at reasonable terms.

All subscription quoted will be weekly acknowledged.

U. CLOUGH AND A. W. DANIELS, PRINTERS.

POETRY.

For the Voice of Industry.

THE DEPARTED.

Come they not back, the forms of the departed!
Come they not back upon the earth once more?

To shield with pure wings the weary heart;

And wait them onward to a brighter shore?

When night o'er earth her graceful form is leaving,
And streams of light go floating softly by;

And fragrant airs come fraught with gentle meaning;

Hushing the heart with their sweet hushes;

Then, faint and weary with life's ebb-tide stirring,
When kin I have a cushion still to bring;

There comes a soft, fond, silent saying;

It is the finding of the golden bough;

When dreams sleep around the form is twining;

And fond the vision of my soul unites;

Paint on their soules depths, comes brightly clinging,

The glowing beauty of thine angel eyes.

When feelings faint in my warm heart quiver,
And when of answering their tumult calls;

Again I hear their golden pinions rustling,

Weakly they hold me in their spirit arms;

Yet come they back the forms of the departed;

In all my paths their shadowy shapes I see;

They comfort, cheer and bless the weary-hearted.

Alas! the dead alone are true to me!

M. J. H.

Lowell, March, 1847.

For the Voice of Industry.

MATINS.—NO. I.

The orient blushest,

With the promise of day;

And the hill-tops are waiting

To catch the first ray;

Already the flowers

Are awake on the lawn;

And the wild birds are chanting,

The hymn of the dawn.

All hail to the token

That promises day;

For the light has been gleamy,

That is passing away;

Its watches of strangle

Wide darkness and pain,

And its dreams full of horror,

Will come not again.

Good courage, ye millions!

These signs cannot lie;

They waited for morning,

Is kissing the sky;

As a light comes darkness,

And morn follows night;

Or from Chaos

Shall burst on our sight.

JACQUES.

Lowell, Mass.

From Houghton's London Journal.

THE VERDICT OF THE POOR.

BY EDWARD YOUNG.

Sits a man upon a stone,

Slipping slow his under-tones:

"Comes not such a master—"

He is old, and lame, and poor,

"Riches are a glorious boon,

As is wealth beneath the Moon."

Thus the maid, upon the stone,

Singeth slow, in undertones:

"Not for boasting, but only care,

Dwell where honest riches are;

Not for boasting, but only care,

Sounds what the wretched need.

"But for giving—God above

Gives all men in his love,

Hoard or squander—desperate sin

They so heart-broke drunks do—"

Came the sun across the moon;

He was old, and lame and poor;

And the maid, upon the stone,

Spake thus, in undertones:

"Here is gold—the wretched feel
Miseries which the Rich can heat."

But, blessed, he hangs his head,

Asking not another's bread.

"Here is gold—the wretched feel
Miseries which the Rich can heat."

She is fair, but poor I prize

Her sister of the bandaged eyes.

"Merry travels with glorious feet!"

Thus he makes her answer moist—

"She is fair, but poor I prize

Her sister of the bandaged eyes.

"Industry will up and strive;

Lifelong effort will free its shame,

Begging alms in Holy Name."

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

"Justice for the young and old;

Give them both—what rich men's gold;

Age has lost its right to rest;

Honest work is young man's quest.

"Justice for the young and old;

Though another's youth more—"

Thus the old man made reply,

Taking sight of Charity.

under the most charming Christmas tree. It was still larger and more ornamented than that she had seen through the glass door at the rich Merchant's, the last Christmas; a thousand candles burnt on the green branches; and molten pictures, like those which ornament the shop windows, looked down at her. The little girl lifted up both her hands—then the match was extinguished—the many Christmas candles rose higher and higher; she saw that they were bright stars—one of them fell and made a fiery stripe in the sky.

"Now on die!" said the poor girl, for old grandmother, who alone had been kind to her, but who was now dead, had told her that when a star falls a soul goes up to God.

She again struck a match against the wall, it shone all around, and old grandmother stood in the lustre, so shining, so mild and blissful. "Grandmother!" exclaimed the little girl, "oh take me with you! I know you will be gone away when the match goes out, like the winter stove, the delicious roast goose, and the delightful Christmas tree!" and she struck in has the whole remainder of match that was in the bubbles—she would not lose sight of grandmother, and the matches shone with such brilliancy that it was clearer than in broad daylight. Grandmother had never before looked so pretty, so great; she lifted the poor little girl up in her arms, and they flew so high in splendor and joy, there was no cold, no hunger, no anxiety—they were with God!

But the little girl sat in the corner, by the fire, as it was with the matches, of which a bundle was burnt. She has been trying to warm herself said they! But no one knew what beautiful things she had seen in what splendor and gladness she had entered with her old grandmother into New Year's joys.

The New-Year's morning rose over the fire as it sat with the matches, of which a bundle was burnt. She has been trying to warm herself said they! But no one knew what beautiful things she had seen in what splendor and gladness she had entered with her old grandmother into New Year's joys.

Booth had been playing at Mobile. At the close of his engagement he accepted an offer from Mr. Eberly, to play at a town a few miles from Louisville, and as pedestrianism was one of his peculiarities, he started on foot with the intention of walking the whole distance.

While on his journey he encountered an officer with a runaway slave on horseback whom he was conducting to the town where Booth was playing.

The officer, with his slave, had dismounted at an inn to take breakfast, and left the horse standing at the door, while Booth, after having concluded that riding was much easier than, and preferable to walking, mounted and rode away. The horse, of course, being afterwards missed, was pursued, overtaken and made prisoner. On being questioned relative to his name, he answered "Lovett."

Lovett was a notorious horse-thief, who had long eluded the officers of justice, for whose apprehension a reward of five hundred dollars was offered. Previous to his execution (for he had since been arrested and hung) he bequeathed his head to Booth and the skull to the representative of "Richard" by Mr. Rice, the comedian, and the skull still adorns the mantle of one of Mr. Booth's apartments, as a curiosity.

Booth, on answering "Lovett," was immediately rushed upon by several persons, anxious to secure his services. He fled, walked, ran, until out of breath, to the inn, and there was Lovett, with the patch upon his host, as before.

Parsons was taken ill and continued so for several days and Booth resorted to another strategem to recover him. He feigned illness and death, and, not having made an arrangement with a friend at his lodgings, he was taken from the inn in a coffin, bored with holes which allowed him to breathe, and conveyed from the jail, which satisfied Parsons that he was specially rid of "Lovett."

A short time afterwards, the tragedian met Parsons and inquired why he had circulated a report that he (Booth) was Lovett. Parsons explained the resemblance, and apologized to him for having acted so rudely in market.

The Legislature has varied its labors in the way of "aiding and comforting" corporations, by doing a little in the way of raising salaries. The clerk in the Adjutant General's office, is to receive hereafter $300, it is thought the Legislature will not get through its arduous public labors for the benefit of private bodies and individuals, until the middle of next month.—[Fitchburg Tribune.

undescribable stare of contempt, regarding him as his worst but most important prisoner, and looking carefully at his dress in order to identify him in case of accident.

One of the bars of the prison-window had become detached, so that it could be removed without any difficulty, allowing any one of moderate dimensions to get through the aperture.

During the absence of Parsons, who daily went to market, Booth managed to get through the window, and by means of blankets tied together, was lowered to the ground. He at once made his way to the market, where he met Parsons, who immediately recognized him.

"Hooley," said Parsons, "how the devil come you here?"

"I never saw you before," said the tragedian looking steadily at the face.

"Stay here a moment then," returned Parsons, "and away he went, as fast as he could conveniently walk to the prison. In the meantime Booth had repaired to the jail and was hoisted to his place of confinement.

Parsons entered to see if "Lovett" was there and the first individual whom he encountered was Booth, his hair almost stood erect with wonder and astonishment.

"Why, fellow," said Parsons, "did I not leave you in the market, ten minutes since?" "I never saw you before," said the tragedian with his unfeeling gaze, and in his deep and singular tone of voice.

Parsons was incredulous, as he hastened back to market, and there stood Julian Brutus, alias Lovett, who had left the jail as before, and arrived first.

"How are you, Parsons?" said Booth. "How is your nephew, the parson?"

"Parsons' check began to tremble he could hardly believe his senses. He walked, he ran, until out of breath, to the inn, and there was Lovett, with the patch upon his host, as before.

Parsons' wit began to turn he could hardly believe his senses. He walked, he ran, until out of breath, to the inn, and there was Lovett, with the patch upon his host, as before.

Parsons was taken ill and continued so for several days and Booth resorted to another strategem to recover him. He feigned illness and death, and, not having made an arrangement with a friend at his lodgings, he was taken from the inn in a coffin, bored with holes which allowed him to breathe, and conveyed from the jail, which satisfied Parsons that he was specially rid of "Lovett."

A short time afterwards, the tragedian met Parsons and inquired why he had circulated a report that he (Booth) was Lovett. Parsons explained the resemblance, and apologized to him for having acted so rudely in market.

The Legislature has varied its labors in the way of "aiding and comforting" corporations, by doing a little in the way of raising salaries. The clerk in the Adjutant General's office, is to receive hereafter $300, it is thought the Legislature will not get through its arduous public labors for the benefit of private bodies and individuals, until the middle of next month.—[Fitchburg Tribune.

THE VOICE OF INDUSTRY

SOCIAL KINDNESS.

How are we to understand it, that, while blessings are showered around us, as the summer rain; there is so little real happiness on earth. Go with me if you please to yonder great thoroughfare, where pass to and fro, persons in every variety of circumstance; old and young, rich and poor; some claiming a home in our own favored America; and others, there are, who have homes and friends on the other side of the Atlantic. Observe them as they hasten along, each one in eager pursuit of happiness! One expecting to find it in this, and another in that; yet rarely do we find the man who can say he is truly happy.

It is true, that for man's nature puts on her most beautiful robes; for him she wraps herself in her snowy shroud; lovely even in this. Man may (if he will) hear music in the murmuring streams, or in the song of birds; in the sighing wind and the gentle breeze; in the flowing forest, or in the proud waving forest; or the heaving ocean? All day the sun shines gaily upon him, and when night draws around him her sable curtain, the moon looks kindly in upon him, and seems to say, sleep weary mortal, I will hold my vigil over thy couch till dawn. Nature is richly fraught with beauty; her voice is a continual music, from the rustling leaf to the song of an angel, yet man is unhappy even in the midst of all this. And why is it? Oh! why is it that man is so wretched? Let me ask—Is it not because he allows his selfish, passions to enslave him? Does not the love of gain, oftentimes, bind men down to earth and make them to forget their high and holy destiny. Like the man in the fable, they play with straws while a crown is extended for them. These facts are what embitter their cup of human life; yet these are not all; by no means. Man is unkind and unkind—forgetful of the great command, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart; and thy neighbor as thyself." Persons often run through the world, as though unconscious of any duty; and if conscious, regardless of that duty. Some one has said wisely, that courtesy is strictly speaking, a Christian grace. It is indeed a plant of Heavenly origin, and it is ours to be courteous to all, even if they differ from us widely in opinion and sentiment. It may often be said of two individuals; that the flower which one world cherish as the very flower of heaven the other would count as a noxious weed. Why then are we to behave? Are we to be idle, to please the idle, or ignorant to please the vicious. No, for if we did, we should not succeed in pleasing them. But we are to rejoice with those that rejoice; and to weep with those that weep. To contribute all we can in small things, as well as great, to ameliorate the dark condition of our race, and scatter flowers on a thorny path.

If we are in company with those whose tastes and habits are opposed to ours, we are to put some restraint upon our own that theirs may not be offended. If we are with those whose manners are disgusting or tempers ungenial to us, we are bound to cast a veil over the disgust they undesignedly excite. It is evident then that "social kindness" is a duty imposed upon us by the Great Creator for it is essentially necessary to our own happiness and the happiness of all around us.

I speak kindly then to thy fellow mortal while art with him; thou mayest again meet him in the drama of human life; if not here on earth, then will meet him on that blessed shore where all is loveliness—where every heart is kind and true. Thou shall there spend a long eternity in the presence of the God, who is himself the very essence of love.

AMERICAN COURTSHIP.

Here the period of courtship is recognized, and just too, as the most blissful of human existence—brightest sunset, and most enchanting spot on the wide side of human existence. Generally speaking, it extends over a space of from one to five years, at a time too,

When heart, and the mind are alike peculiarly susceptible to all that is requisite in nature. When the future is painted by the imagination of a long life of uninterrupted and sublime acquisition of conjugal happiness, and we see in the distance nothing but brightness and bliss. Before we have been taught the lessons of bitter experience, before care, and pain, and miseries have robbed the golden dreamer of youth, of their rich promise and sunny splendor.

Before life has caught a shadow from the wings of time—when bounding forth with high hopes, and panting spirit, we pass the silver-headed way farrier of an earlier generation, as the being of another world—as those who have flushed the joyous career that we are but just beginning. Then it is that the heart, in the springtime of existence, thrills and dilates with many an exquisite emotion—that death seems afar off, and rob'd of all his terrors. This, this, is the time when the future rises up as a rich landscape, with green fields, pleasant valleys, shadowy retreats, and a golden sunset bending above the whole.—Then it is the heart expresses with a magnanimous sensation, and calls with thrilling eagerness, for some fair spirit to mingle in and give additional zest to the scene, an id of whom we see all the elements of perfection—a being of the heart.

Fair as the first fell of woman kind!

When on that dread, yet lovely serpent smiling; Whose image then was stamped upon her mind— But once beguiled, and over more beguiled;

Dazzling at that old, too transcendent vision

To Sorrow's phantom shrouded given, When heart meet heart again in dream's abyss,

Aid paints the last on earth review'd in Heaven;

For a time we have not the possession of all our faculties. The malinsess of our nature is softened and subdued. Our world seems concentrated into one slight object, and what, in the eyes of others, are blighted and imperfection, are regarded by the mad lover as of little more importance than spots on the sun.

And now kind reader, to give my condensed view of the whole matter under consideration, and to incorporate, the various ramifications, it is little less than a lottery.

E. M.

proceeds of their exorbitant rents. At a reasonable estimation, the rented buildings of (except Corporations boarding-houses) in this city, pay for themselves sixteen or twelve years, and yet they remain still in the hands of capital, while labor continues to pay for houses that it can never own.

We act seriously and candidly, if there is not something really wrong, in the working-men—those who build houses and produce the wealth of the world, being necessitated to pay nearly all they receive for their labor, for a place to stay in, thereby disengaging them from ever procuring the means to build houses for themselves? We do not complain so much of individuals in this matter, as of the systems of law, equity and religion, which suffer such a state of things to exist and augment around us—a state of things which is filling the country with ignorance, irreligion, intertempore, vice and crime, by depriving the masses of comfortable homes and the means of education and social, physical, mental and moral improvement.

We have a law upon our Statute books against receiving more than six per cent interest on money loaned, which is vastly less important than the subject under consideration. Why not with much more propriety, and benefit to the poor and laboring portion of the community, pass a law prohibiting Land-Lords from exacting such unjust and exorbitant rents. The best and permanent remedy for this growing evil, which aims to render the condition of the poor and landless portion of our people as depressed and hopeless as their fellows across the water, is only to be found in the equal and just distribution of the Soil, which will insure a home to all, and prevent one man from possessing and monopolizing the homes of others. Let those who would secure a home for themselves and posterity, free from the Land-Lords' capricious selfishness, encourage the "Free Soil" cause.

MORTALITY OF LOWELL.—The following from the Lowell Patriot, is a well deserved and timely rebuke even men who apparently are willing to sacrifice the best good of their fellow beings, upon the shrine of popular sympathy. Oh, how little of true human sympathy and pure Christian philanthropy, is to be found among men of influence and standing in Society. "We cannot serve God and Mammon."

"WE received through the post office, from Dr. Brown, City Physician, we presume, a pamphlet of eight pages, entitled "Bill of Mortality of the City of Lowell for the year 1846." Dr. Bessey, in the first paragraph of the prefatory remarks, says—"will be presented before the following statement, that nearly twice as many deaths occurred in Lowell during last year, as in either of the three previous years, and above two hundred more than ever before occurred in the city in a single year. It is needless to speculate on the causes of this increased mortality, since there is so little probability that it would add to any sordid satisfaction results?"

Dr. Bessey conceives that you are doing your whole duty as a Christian and philanthropic physician when you discuss so momentous a subject with so much consciousness. "It is needless," you say, "to speculate on the causes of the increased mortality"—it is needless for you to do so, no doubt—you know what the causes are—but how many proportion among the whole number of our population, know anything of these causes? Is it not because our population is becoming more permanent—more decidedly a manufacturing people—with less of the comforts and conveniences of life, less fearless liberty, less freedom to breathe the fresh air, and a less number have homes to return to, and die!"

In 1833, the population of Lowell was 13,633, deaths 223, or one in 59.13; in 1836, 17,333 deaths, 329, or one in 53.69; in 1840, 20,931 deaths, 426, or one in 49.24; in 1844, 25,163, deaths, 362, or one in 63.51; in 1848, 29,841, deaths 650, or one in 47.78.

Here we have the interesting fact that while the population increased in the city of Lowell in two years, from 25,163 to 29,841, or about 14 per cent., the deaths in the same time increased from 362 to 650 or about 40 per cent! Had the population increased for the last two years in the ratio that deaths have increased, Lowell would now contain 50,000 inhabitants instead of 30,000, about the present population. From tables published in this report, the average mortality in England is shown to be 1 to 46.39, in 1841, and in Lowell, in 1848, to 47.78.

We trust this report will receive the attention of this people, and before Lowell becomes such a charnel house as Manchester, England, something will be done to avert the awful state of things to which it shows us rapidly hastening.

CONGRESS.—The body of public trustees having remained in session and squandered the people's money to the extent of Constitutional license, adjourned last week Friday. It is thought that love of their country, especially her "Civis," will call them together soon, in an extra Session.

EXTRAET.—In the first line of the sweet little "Main" on page next, intent should read

"orient."

EDITORIAL NOTICES OF THE VOICE OF INDUSTRY.

At the present juncture of affairs we have thought the following among a multitude of notices our humble but devout sheet has received from our brethren of the Press, might be of great interest to our readers and friends, which we insert indiscriminately. The following is from the infatuated sheet The Lowell Courier, which is a conspicuous article from a conspicuous paper edited by a conspicuous man, and is entitled to a conspicuous place in our list.

The VOICE OF INDUSTRY appears this week with a new head, and printed very much better than usual. Miss Mehitable Eastman has become one of the editors, 17 years will use her influence to keep the paper free from the infatuation which have characterized it ever since its establishment in this city, we think she will succeed. In such case, the paper has our good wishes for its prosperity.—[Lowell Courier.]

In contrast with the preceding, are the following early remarks from the mainly pen of Horace Greeley of the New York Tribune; a man and a paper above our praise. To say that we differ in some respects, is but to acknowledge that we belong to the human species, subject to human errors and frailties; but when those differences arise from honest minds, laboring for honest purposes, they will be entertained by the true-hearted friend to society with charity and respect. "We shall endeavor to be belligerent in spirit only with wrong and at peace only with right. "Hearts may agree, though heads differ."

—The Voice of Industry at Lowell, Organ of the "New England Labor Reform League," has passed under the Editorial charge of Wm. F. Young and Miss M. EASTMAN, and still will be published weekly at $1.25 per annum or five copies for $5 in advance. It is the organ of the most advanced and most advanced of a Bureau in the House of Commons of Labor and at the same time champion of Land Reform, Temperance, Peace and general Morality. It is a little to belligerent in spirit, and especially inclined to war on Corporations and on Capital, though its conductors realize in their conder-moments that the evils they would expose are inherent in any class, but in taste themselves are singular. The views, though widely taken, are not quite agreed upon, and on certain topics far more subservient and baying after. If the Hard-handed Many are not unfeeling to themselves it will receive it, [N. Y. Tribune.]

Voice of Industry.—This paper, the publication of which was suspended a short time since, has been revived. It now makes its appearance in a new dress, and looks as neat as a pin. It is under the editorial charge of Mr. W. F. Young, who unites a fair better paper than his predecessor. As the organ of the "Industrial Reform League," we commend to the attention of those who are engaged in the welfare of the laboring classes.—[Manchester Messenger.]

Voice of Ipswich.—We are glad to learn that the Voice of Ipswich, the organ of the Rights of Labor, is placed upon a footing which will secure its continuance at least for one year. It has done a brave work in combating the efforts of organization, and we trust it will never weary or languish in spreading light before the people. We notice that some of our contemporaries are disposed to read a lesson of good manners to the "Voice"; but its aim, if any, are rather offence of taste than of temper, and should be pardoned to the exertionists of the advocacy of a noble cause. We hope, in due time, to authorize them to throw stones at the "Voice."—[The Haverhill.]

This impure "taste" may be the effects of the crab-apple which present society compels her children to feed upon.

The VOICE OF INDUSTRY.—This valuable weekly paper is the organ of the New England Labor Reform League. It is a faithful exponent of the wages, and rights of factory workers, devoted to the elevation and improvement of the industrial classes, and the final and permanent emancipation of labor from its present subordination, competing and depressive tendencies. It has to bear up against the tremendous power and influence of the organized and corporation wealth of New England. The difficulties it has to contend with are therefore immense, and require for its assistance and support, the contributions and assistance of the friends of Humanity throughout the Union.

The devoted and self-sacrificing labors of W. F. Young, command the paper to the support of the toiling masses in the east, especially those engaged in the factories. Now is the time to subscribe for its support and countenance. An interesting discussion is going on in its columns between a Speculator and an Operative.—[Pittsburgh Dispatch.]

VOICE OF INDUSTRY.—This spirited and independent advocate in the cause of progressive improvement of the laboring classes, started at Lowell, Mass., in 1846. It has not been published by the New England Labor Reform League, but has been transferred to Wm. F. Young and Miss M. EASTMAN, who will continue its publication. Mr. Young has been one of the former editors of this paper, and has done good service in the cause of the toiling millions. The paper appears also with a new head, illustrative of the principles which it advocates.—[Ohio State Tribune.]

To the Northampton Democrat, Young America and Hardinge who copied our Prospectus, in part or entire, we feel specially indebted. Also to the Chromite, Farmer & Ledger, who have added a word of encouragement and hope.

Our best endeavors shall be to prove ourselves worthy the numerous favors we have received by our fidelity to the universal cause of human good.

Citizens Temperance meeting at the City Hall, next Thursday evening.

Correspondents will please have patience, & subscriber next week.

Lowell, March 1, 1847.

DEAR SIR:—Can you inform the public how it is that rich retailers, keeping no license to sell ardent spirits, continue in the traffic, while those of small means are honored with a prosecution? True the latter class are more less criminals to the law, than the first, but it seems to be showing too much difference, if not fear, in prosecuting the poor vendor and passing the picher. For my part I don't think one should suffer the punishments due another; and why is not even handed justice administered to all?

Knowing you are under no particular influence, but insert truth and always ready to sustain it, I shall expect to hear from you on this subject. The temperance reform needs much encouragement, and every action should be had in its favor, but this selecting from three hundred retailers a few who are less wealthy than Marston, Fenn and others, is not calculated to promote the object. Deal with all, show no favor, and my word for it, temperance will yet predominate in this fair city.

A SUBSCRIBER.

In answer to the above we have only to say, that to our mind there is a woful want of moral courage among many of the temperance advocates of this city, that leads them to pass the rich violator of the law, and deal with the poor three cent retailer.

This want of moral courage is not confined to the cause of temperance alone, but may be witnessed in almost all departments of human action. A disposition to reverence wealth, no matter how obtained, is too apt to influence men engaged in reformatory movements.

Wealth and its consequent trappings and influence, is what saves the gentle ruined from prosecution. The genteel drinker who has influence in the State and may be in the Church, and even many who profess great regard for temperance, patronize those establishments and form a guard around them which the administrators of the law dare not encounter, and in many cases the guard itself are administrators of the law.

Until men cease to reverence wealth and equate more than principle and treat all men according to their true deserts, independent of circumstances, and until men have duty and truth more than popularity, these gross inconsistencies will characterize the temperance reform.

PUBLICATIONS.—We have received from those philanthropic and enterprising publishers, Fowlers and Wells, the following highly useful works:

—Spruzen on Education, a neatly bound book of over 300 pages, price 75 cts. Physiology, Animal, and Mental, applied to the preservation and restoration of health of body and power and mind, by O. S. Fowler, over 300 pages, price 75 cts. Fowler on Marriage of over 200 pages, 50 cts. Discourses and Letters on a sober and Temperate Life, by Louis Comoro, a valuable little work on Diet and the necessity of abstemious habits to insure longevity and render life pleasant and valuable.

The above works are for sale at N. J. Danvers Merrimack St.

THE PHENOMENAL JOURNAL FOR March is with us with its usual supply of "good things" for the body and mind.

ELECTRICALS FOR THE PEOPLE.

We are happy to announce that a series of Lectures are to be given in this city, commencing next Wednesday evening, at the City Hall, upon the "prominent humana movements of the age." The lectures are intended for the benefit and improvement of all classes, and will doubtless be of a high order, as a guarantee that they will be such, the services of the following distinguished philanthropists, have been secured.

ADIN BALLOU, Hopedale, G. RILEY, Brook Farm, J. S. DWIGHT, do, S. P. ANDREWES, Boston, W. H. CHANNING, do, H. GREENLEY, New York. The Lowell Brass Band will furnish Music.

Tickets at $2. Twenty-five cents for the Colisseum, &c.—may be had at the Bookstores and News Rooms. Single Tickets, 12 1/2 cents.

Let "The People" see that the lectures are well attended.

"SPECTATOR" seems to think, we take especial pains to "misunderstand" him, which is far from being the case. We do not write for the sake of controversy, but that truth may be developed. We have entertained "Spectator's" articles with charity, but find ourselves unable to understand him, which possibly may be accounted for, from the fact that he does not understand himself, for he evidently squirms about from one position to another like an eel out of its element.

If boldy and unequivocally stating that "Man is the creature of circumstances," is not acknowledging one's self "a believer in the principles of Owen," than we know not what is this, the beginning and end of Mr. Owen's doctrine. It appears to us that Spectator's remarks about the direct and indirect benefits of the Lien Law, is strongly directed with a disposition to quibble; however we will be charitable as possible.

We have expended seventy-four millions, to recover of Mexico a claim of two millions—and it is not yet recovered.—[Catastrophe.]

10 We have received two somewhat lengthy articles during the past week, reviewing an article recently published from one of our correspondents, upon the title. Feeling that a discussion of this subject would be unsatisfactory to both parties and in some respects unprofitable, justice to our own judgment requires that we should withhold the articles from the public; in doing which our estimate of the author's sincerity of purpose and devotion to the cause of humanity, remains unchanged, and we think by a short interview we should be able to convince them that the object they would accomplish could not be advanced in this way. Probably our own views upon the subject would not harmonize with those of either parties.

THE LICENSE LAW IN LOWELL.—For the past two or three weeks a spirited war has been waged with the liquor dealers of this city, under the superintendence of a prosecuting committee, chosen at one of the Citizens' Temperance Meetings, for this purpose. Some 30 or more retailers have been brought before Judge Crosby and fined—and several bound over. We have but little faith in producing any permanent good in the temperance cause by Law, still we hope those who honestly believe in its efficacy, will act like consistent men and walk up to their convictions of duty without fear or favor.

NEWS FROM THE SEAT OF WAR IS of a very unsatisfactory character; rumors are abroad that a general engagement has taken place at Saltillo—these rumors want confirmation.

The people of Vera Cruz are expecting an attack upon that place. Appearances indicate that a serious and bloody conflict is not far distant.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION.—From the records received up to last evening, the state of the vote indicates that the regular Democratic party are successful. The vote is unusually large, showing that a great effort was made by all parties.

Whatever the result may be, we have a message to deliver to the dormant party.

MASSACHUSETTS LICENSE LAW SUSTAINED. The Supreme Court of the United States have unanimously decided in favor of the constitutionality of the Massachusetts License Law. We hope the friends of legal action in carrying on the temperance cause, will now be enabled to test it to their entire satisfaction.

A CONVENTION of the New England Labor Reform League will be held in the City on the 30th and 31st of March.

All friendly to the elevation of the industrial classes, human progress and improvement, are earnestly requested to be present.

A FIRE broke out on Wednesday morning in a building on Middlesex St., owned by Thos. Bixby and occupied by him as dwelling house and a currier's shop. The body of the building was burned out, destroying an amount of leather and other property—insured.

We understand that quite an excitement exists at Dover N. H., on the subject of Labor Reform.

May its spirit be well founded and perseveringly sustained.

A DEMOCRATIC BANK—Paul—Mother Earth—Exchange.—The transacting of the nursery and garden. Deposits.—Happy sobriety and early independence. Assets—Smiling fields waving with a golden harvest. Liabilities—Imbued to God an who sends the sunshine and the rain. Dividends—Health, wealth, and honest patriotic hearts.—[Young America.]

DEFATE OF THE WILMOT PROVISO.—In Congress Monday and Tuesday, 1st and 2d inst., the most important proceedings were in the Senate relative to the Wilmot Proviso which was defeated by a vote of 31 to 21.—[Former and Ledger.]

TEN HOUR SYSTEM.—The mechanics of Bath, Me., have had a public meeting at which they passed resolutions declaring it expedient to adopt a uniform system by which to regulate the hours of labor to constitute a day's work; and that the ten hour system is the best.—[Manchester Messenger.]

On Friday morning, the steamer Cricket was nearly consumed by fire at her wharf in New York. The fire was finally subdued, but not till a loss had accrued of some $25,000, or $18,000, besides $1,000 more.

At Glasgow, Tenn., a few days since, a young man eloped with and married the daughter of a gentleman of that place, and on the return of the parties, the father of the bride killed the young man with a double-barreled gun.

The first vessel which has entered Boston from Texas, since the annexation, arrived at this port last week, laden with cotton and tobacco.

The Pork.—The popularity of the Pork remains unabated. He has recently raised the wages of laborers, and given directions, for extensive drainage works.

COMMUNICATIONS.

To the Editor of the 'Voice,' in reply to his remarks on Spectator, Feb. 26.

I must say, that I am happy to agree with you, even in one thing. The law here, to which you allude, go heart and hand with you; for I believe it to be one of those kind of laws, that will do much more good than harm. The evil of depriving a few honest and capable, but poor men, from taking contracts, would be small in comparison to the good that the great mass would derive by incompetent, bankrupt and unprincipled contractors being driven out of the market, as such a law will ultimately do.

This is, then, one of those laws that should be made especially for the laborer. In selecting this you have done about as well as I supposed you could do. But its special effects will be felt first by that class of honest but industrious contractors, who are responsible to pay all their bills, and who have heretofore been underpaid by those who do not. Next, by the wealthy dealers who furnish the materials. They will be ones that will first take the proper legal steps to secure their pay, and it will only be through these contractors that the laborer will be benefited at all.

Should such a law be made, the present session, not one in twenty of the laborers will give the necessary legal notice to secure their pay, and the failures of the next session will prove it. The law in the end will benefit them, but it will be, through its benefits to others. It seems to me, that you take more pains to misrepresent, than to understand what I intend to convey. You make me a believer in the principles of Owen, when I only said that Owen was the only man who had stated any principle, that could possibly be successful, without giving any opinion whether they would, or could not. I now say that I feel favorably to most of them; but I have not studied the whole sufficiently as yet, to form an opinion. In my opinion to him, I find in my mind his experiment in the education of children, by which he demonstrated that all or nearly all, might by proper training, be made honest and intelligent. His method, was, I believe, to take the children from woman and put them beyond her control. This part I doubt, because woman's attachment to her children is so strong, that she will never be induced to give them up to the care and control of strangers altogether. If so, she must be responsible for all that I have said to her charge.

I must say that I am glad to see such a letter from Mr. Combe, as you published in your last. His views are true and just, and correspond so nearly with my own, that I feel a little proud, and wish that you would get one from him touching infantile education, and woman's duty and responsibility as a wife, a mother, and her relation to society. It is to such men as Combe, that we must look up to for wisdom and advice, and I should doubt my own opinion in almost anything, if it differed from theirs, and should view it a good many times before setting it up in opposition. And I think on a deeper and more thorough investigation, you will be disposed to correct your readers upon the principles he advanced.

I intended to have closed my correspondence with the 'Voice,' with this; but I cannot refrain from answering 'Operative,' without standing the difficulties that attend it. It is much easier to find faults, than to give good and correct advice at any time; more especially upon a subject that has been so much neglected, and which almost all avoid. I must take a little time to consider upon it.

SPECTATOR.

EFFECTUAL REFORM.

Mr. YOUNG.—I am glad to see your reinstated in the Editorial chair. You show that amidst the changes and deserts of other men, you intend to persevere in Labor and Home.

The great reason of failure in any good undertaking is the want of faith and persevering energy; and this fact is peculiarly applicable to the workingmen's reform. How many are apt to give up the ship when storms threaten them, or fail to secure their own profit or gratification! That there is danger of too much selfish ambition among laborers, I have been aware since I attended the workingmen's Convocation in Boston in 1844.—

The Troy Post-examiner states that on Thursday morning, an explosion took place in one of the buildings at the Arsenal, in a room devoted to the manufacture of Fuses and Bomb Shells, which destroyed all the fuse composition, blew out the windows, and injured, more or less, nearly all the workmen engaged in that department.

It is supposed to have been caused by a boy stepping upon some of the composition which lay upon the brick floor of the room with a boot which contained iron tacks in the heel. This ignited and exploded all the composition in the room, amounting to 13 or 14 pounds. The explosion caused a loud report, damaged the building, and set it on fire.

There were about twelve or fifteen persons in the room. Eleven of them are severely injured, and three, it is supposed, cannot survive.

One man was blown through a window before which he was at work, and they were all seen running in various directions, with their clothing torn off or on fire, and the flesh and hair of some of them severely burnt. Some of them immediately plunged into the snow, not only to extinguish their burning cloths, but to allay their excruciating sufferings. Many of them are cut and mangled in a shocking manner.

EXAMPLE TO EMPLOYERS.—Mr. James M. Kie, the enterprising publisher of the Ayrshire Wreath, and many other talented works connected with Ayrshire, entertained those persons employed in his house to a sumptuous supper in his dwelling house, King-street, on the evening of Christmas. The supper-table literally groaned under the profusion of substantial and delicate viands with which it was spread. Amid speech, song and sentiment, the evening passed pleasantly away, and at an early hour on the following morning the company separated. This is the second entertainment Mr. Kie has given his men, and we understand it is his intention to continue them annually. The good effects produced on both employer and employee by such friendly meetings as these are many. That Mr. Kie may have many such meetings with his men as the one he had on the Christmas of 1846, is our earnest wish. From the kindness he displays towards those in his employ he is loved and respected by them all.—[People's Journal.]

There are in Pittsburg, Pa., at present, nine daily newspapers. Fifty years ago the place was a wilderness.

The Washington Union says that 5000 postmasters have recently resigned for want of compensation.

The surplus product of corn in the States of New Jersey is said to be worth $150,000.

WEAVERS.—We are informed, that a great number of persons, heretofore employed as weavers in this city are unable to get work, and that many of them are in a deplorably distressed situation.—[Mechanics Journal.]

VERMONT BUTTER.—A young married lady in Ryegate, Vt., has made during the past season, from eight cows, 1,700 pounds of butter, which has been sold in market at an average price of 20 cents per pound making the handsome sum of $240.

Israël Pachas has freed the slaves in his own service.

18 cotton factories in Georgia, with a total capital of $1,500,000, pay from 13 to 24 per cent profit.

Madame Adolph, the old Witch-of-Eldor, of a fortune-teller, has been arrested in New York, for practising her art upon the credulous maidens of that city.

LATER FROM THE ARMY.

We received our New Orleans papers very late this morning. The particulars of the safety of the Louisiana troops, we select in preference to the numerous uninteresting details of other matters. It appears that Yankees with, for once, over-matched Mexican cavalry, and a set of long legs were shown, for want of long guns.

Gen. Scott was hourly expecting at Tampa, and the health of the troops there, 7000 in number, was much better than has been represented.

The N. Y. regiments were still off Tampa, and not allowed to land.

Lieut. Gibson, 2d artillery, is dead. Swarms of robbers infest the road between Monterrey and Camargo, and the rancheros were gathering in large numbers.

An attack on Matamoros was expected.

The Mexican Congress appears to anticipate some sort of a Revolution.

The attempt to usurp property, is everywhere unpopular. In Queretaro the principal officers refused to recognize it and resigned. It was read, under a military guard, and produced a revolt, during which eight citizens were shot.—Boston Star.

EXPLOSION AT THE U. S. ARSENAL AT WEST TROY.

The Troy Post-examiner states that on Thursday morning, an explosion took place in one of the buildings at the Arsenal, in a room devoted to the manufacture of Fuses and Bomb Shells, which destroyed all the fuse composition, blew out the windows, and injured, more or less, nearly all the workmen engaged in that department.

It is supposed to have been caused by a boy stepping upon some of the composition which lay upon the brick floor of the room with a boot which contained iron tacks in the heel. This ignited and exploded all the composition in the room, amounting to 13 or 14 pounds. The explosion caused a loud report, damaged the building, and set it on fire.

There were about twelve or fifteen persons in the room. Eleven of them are severely injured, and three, it is supposed, cannot survive.

One man was blown through a window before which he was at work, and they were all seen running in various directions, with their

"ISSUES FOR 1847."

LAND LIMITATION, INDEMNIBLE HOMESTEAD, AND FREEDOM OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

CONSTITUTION OF LIBERTY, INDUSTRY AND BROTHERHOOD.

To establish Equality, and Brotherhood among men of every race, to promote the Welfare of Men, alienable and inalienable, shall be now established and guaranteed; to Redress the Industrial Classes from the condition of Inferiority which has hitherto existed; to secure the rights of Labor; to unite in one the Effects of Humanity; to promote, to encourage the rational useful classes, do adopt and recommend to the people of the United States, the following Constitution, as the Basis of a New Moral Government.

Art. I. This is a day of which it must be the constitution of the Industrial Congress.

Art. II. This Congress shall be constituted upon the 1st of January.

Art. III. 10 members shall be elected annually by females or associates of men or women who subscribe to these principles, and all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain Inalienable Rights; among which are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness; to secure these rights, a Government of the People, by the People, and for the People.

Art. IV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. V. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. VI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. VII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. VIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. IX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. X. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XXXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XL. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. XLIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. L. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXVIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LX. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXI. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIII. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXIV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

Art. LXV. They shall be elected by associations consisting each of 5 or more persons and less than 50, male and female, and each association shall be entitled to one vote.

&lt;p

