MISCELLANY.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS.

BY RICHARD CAREY.

Did we think of the light and the sunshine,
Of the flowers and the soft soil?

When we sit and the world darkens,

And nothing but the stars are left?

How should we dip the shadows
Of still and deep despair,

And lessen the weight of anguish?

What is there but the heart beat?

Then comes the light of day,
And serves us like a sun;

But night is it only that gives

But night is it only that gives

That light which fills the sky?

What may not look for the dawn?

And there is no human being

Who does not long for the light?

But the heart, by secret pictures,

May find some sunny spot;

For as the days of winter,
When the snow drifts over the hills;

So when the stars are still,

And nothing but the stars are left?

How should we dip the shadows
Of still and deep despair,

And lessen the weight of anguish?

What is there but the heart beat?

Then comes the light of day,
And serves us like a sun;

But night is it only that gives

But night is it only that gives

That light which fills the sky?

What may not look for the dawn?

And there is no human being

Who does not long for the light?

But the heart, by secret pictures,

May find some sunny spot;

THE ENIGMATIC BOY.

BY L. MARIA CHILD.

In the old town of Rudesheim, on the Rhine, is one of those dilapidated castles which have been the scenes of many a story of German romance. Among the ruins, Karl Schleisinger, a poor hardworking peasant, made for himself a little home, and built with his good wife and little boy, Fritz, a snug cottage in the shadow of the castle.

Fritz, a boy of six, was the most beautiful and prettiest child in the village.

He had a golden hair, blue eyes, and a smile that lit up his face.

He was the darling of all the children, and the envy of all the women.

He was the pride of his parents, and the joy of his mother's heart.

He was the admiration of all the neighbors.

He was the envy of all the boys.

He was the admiration of all the girls.

He was the pride of all the women.

He was the admiration of all the men.

He was the envy of all the girls.

He was the admiration of all the boys.

He was the pride of all the men.

GRANDE, ROBERT.

We publish, our good friend's communication, though we cannot endorse every word in it, all corrupting and veneficent places and influences be exposed. We have no wish to expose, but we may always, to avoid scandal and censure, desist from exposing the jathesness of an iniquitity a criminal distinction should always be made between that which is inherent and malice, and that which is sub-incidently connected with it.

We will give of views of Thoreau, and other sentimentalists in general, in a future number.

Mr. Orton will lecture before District No. 12, the Men's Protective Union, in Worcester, on Monday Evening, Dec. 5th, on the subject of Organizing Trade upon principles which will do justice to the producing classes. It is hoped, measures will be taken to secure full attendance. The Lecture will be free to ladies and gentlemen.

To SUBSCRIBERS IN LOWELL. — We regret that partly on account of an unavoidable delay in getting out our paper, and partly through a want of promptness on the part of the "Express," our Lowell subscribers were not served with their paper at usual time. We have taken measures which we trust will prevent a future reoccurrence of this unfortunate delay.

MEXICO. — It was stated in the authority of a letter from an officer in Mexico, published by the Philadelphia "Advertiser," that Pedzpa had been nominated President of Mexico by the Congress, with full powers to treat for peace.

TERIBLE STEAMBOAT DISASTER! Two Hundred and Forty Lives Lost. — On Friday, the 21st ult., the popular steamer of her way to Milwaukee, the "Delaware," bound for Green Bay, took fire between Lake Superior and the Wisconsin shore. Two hundred and forty persons either perished in the flames, or were drowned.

The fire was communicated to the hold from the boiler. The conduct of Mr. Blish, on that occasion, displayed more genuine Americanism than that of any man in the country.

It was reported a poor man, Mr. George, succumbed to his family's rich support and affection. If he was rich, then, the fate should erect a monument to his personal honor.

We take the following from the "Buffalo Commercial Advertiser."

A cash was made for the small boat, which, though it could not be easily made, Mr. David Blish, of Superior, who was away and having taken Capt. Sweet, the commander of the steamer, from his bed, where he lay in a fainting condition, to the shore, the boat could safely reach the boat for the shores.

Mr. Blish voluntarily remained behind.

The popular Delaware lay in sight about the time of the accident, and was soon to arrive in time to save those on board from destruction. But the Delaware reached the spot, after having passed the steamer, and the boat were either burned or broken, with the exception of one which was picked up.

Mr. Blish, though he had the right to be present, and of course was, did not appear to have his boat ready to receive the passengers.

This was a greater destruction of lives than ever before, when the steamer Lakes.

There had been a large number of steamers, amounting to 40 or 50 boats, at that port, and a great quantity of dry goods, &c., estimated that the loss is not less than $30,000 or $10,000.
